

First black, Deaf female lawyer Claudia Gordon on disability inclusion in philanthropy

In this video interview, Claudia Gordon, a lawyer and anti-discrimination advocate highlights the role philanthropy can play in disability inclusion.

Transcript begins.

[inspirational piano music]

[Claudia Gordon, a tall black woman with short blonde hair, wearing a bright blue dress, responds to interview questions using American Sign Language that is then interpreted into spoken English.]

CLAUDIA GORDON: Philanthropy can have a broad reach to educate the wider population and elevate the concerns, needs, and issues, and to talk about the barriers that people with disabilities face on a daily basis.

VOICE-OVER: Where are you in your Journey to Inclusion? For more information, go to DisabilityPhilanthropy.org, and promote using the hashtag DisabilityInclusion. Brought to you by the Presidents' Council on Disability Inclusion in Philanthropy.

End of transcript.